“ My heart goes out to both of you for the loss of your son David. David went to school with my son's and I knew him well. I'm lost for words and shocked. We as parents live for our children, follow them through their lives hoping we've done our best, and you did raise three beautiful children. Tara and John have lost a brother. I can't imagine why things happen this way. I pray the Lord gives all of you the strength you need. He will live on with all the memories you've shared and his classmates have many memories. My son's were all very sad to hear about Davids passing.

“ I have read Dave's obituary over and over these past few days while I try to find the perfect words to use for even a simple memory let alone my feelings. I am beyond sad, beyond speechless, and beyond angry that he has been taken from this world. I knew the moment we met at Soaring Eagle that in some way we would be connected for life. What I didn't realize was the profound impact he would have on my life. Dave may have tried to portray a "hard outer shell" but I was fortunate to be touched by his compassionate, warm, loving, and gentle inner shell. Our paths may have taken us in different directions, but we continued to maintain a friendship, bond, and although different we still had much love for each other. Those who knew him knew that this man was one of a kind. We should all be proud to have known him. I do not accept or understand why this has happened, but I hope that everyone can dig deep to find the strength to tackle the next day.

I will not say good bye to you on Wednesday, but rather wait patiently for you to visit me in some unique way. You are forever in my heart.

*Love,
Cathie*

“ I am deeply saddened at the loss of my youngest cousin, the sweet smiling boy that I used to babysit when I was a teenager. I spent many summers at the Verdonk home, being a "mother's helper" to Lois, and having so much fun with my younger cousins. The memories of those times will always hold a special place in my heart.

To Aunt Lois, Uncle John, Tara and John, may our Lord wrap his loving arms around you and give you comfort and peace. David is now surrounded with the love of God and the promise of eternal life that he received at his baptism.

“ This comes as such a shock. Although we'd lost touch over the years, David was like a brother to me and my sister during childhood. He could always be counted on for a snowball fight, a bike race, or some other mischief. The sound of his Big Wheel on the gravel part of your driveway is the soundtrack of my days as a little girl.

As I think back, I remember that David was unfailingly kind. Sure, he could "push our buttons" or do his share of trash talking (before that was even a thing), but he never went too far with a joke or made either of those timid "Grier girls" afraid. But he always was all boy, and most of the things I remember from those years I see over again in my own sons. I have said repeatedly in raising my boys, "Oh, yeah...I can remember that (toy / interest / way of being) now..." and it's like all those old memories came full circle.

His loss feels a little like one of the lights has been turned off in my memories of home, and it will never be the same. I pray for all of you, Mr. and Mrs. Verdonk, Tara, John and families, and hope you will find the strength to keep moving forward somehow. I can't imagine what this loss is like.

I had hoped to be home this week for the services but cannot after all. But I am home quite often and would love to come and sit and visit if you are ever up to it. I love you and cherish the memories our two families have in common. God be with you—as David is now with Him.

“ Sending sincere condolences. My family and The Verdonk family shared many special moments at Sacred Heart Church together. Suzanne and I played ball with Tara, John was in my class and Bill was close to David's age. I'll always think of John and David pulling up in the killer wagon at school. 😊 I pray for God's comfort over your family in these coming days and years , as you miss him. Sending much love to all.
