“ Caught myself thinking about you again. I miss you so much and as I read through the Obituary here in class i can't help but feel myself tear up. I miss you so much that it hurts. We made a cross for you and I could tell you loved it. I'm painting a name plate for you and something for your urn. Grandma told me that you always gave her peach roses since they were her favorite. I thought that was so sweet so I'm painting that as well. I just wanna do something in your memory. Thank you so much fir being the best grandfather I'll ever have. You're always in my heart and I think about you everyday. I stole some of your shirts too :) I wanted to wear them just because they were yours and I figured that would make you smile. Even though you're not here anymore, I still enjoy making you smile and feeling your happiness. I hope you liked the Eulogy too. I felt that you were proud. Hah, I'm tearing up again. At least we all know that you're no longer suffering. We all love you very, very much. Thank you fir making such an impact on my childhood. Even though it hurt when you left, I know that you're better now. I truly didn't know how much you were suffering until after you were really gone and for that I'm sorry. It's been hard knowing that you're not here but what I do know is that you're still watching over Grandma for me. She misses you a whole heck of a lot. We all do. I love you Grandpa.

*I knew it happened a year ago in April just before the flowers were in full bloom. You decided to catch up on your "to do" list in your garden. For this is a journey that we all must take alone, it' all part the master's plan. A step on the road to home. ♡♡
Ed you are missed.*
