“ I thought the hardest thing I'd ever done in my life was to walk away and leave you with your dad. Now, I know that didn't even come close to being the "hardest thing". My heart will never be the same without you, Vic. My tears will never stop flowing at the loss of you. You will eternally be "my little boy" running to throw your arms around me and say, "I love you, Mommy." I love you too sweetie. Always have, always will. Love Mom###imported-begin###LeAnne Burgess###imported-end##

“ To have had a brother to share lifes trials and tribulations with such as you, has been the greatest life one could ask for. The words "Que Pasa Mejo?" will never again be uttered from your lips to my ears. I will miss that very much. I know you can't read this, but I also know that you know I am saying it. Till we meet again, Mejo. I love you Little Brother.

“ Vic is one in a million, he has a way of looking at life that is unique to all. I think my favorite memory of him was either his 30 or 31 birthday. I had gotten all of the family together, Dad, Alicia (mom), Mom, Carl, Ashley, along with my parents. I had only told Vic that we were going to my parents house for dinner. When he walked in and seen everyone I could see the sparkle in his eyes. Afterwards he asked me, "how did you get everyone together." I told him that I invited them. He looked at me like a dog would hearing a strange noise. He asked me "that's it?" I told him that it was his birthday and everyone wanted to celebrate that with him no matter how old he was. He then said "Thank-You for one of the best days, I can't remember the last time that my family has sat down all together and had dinner, I still can't believe they all got together just for me, it is one of the best gifts that anyone has ever given me." Vic I love you, and you will always be remembered.##imported-begin##Amy Brondyke##imported-end##
