“ My condolences to all of Zak's family. I can't believe he's gone! Im so sad for all of u that love him. I also loved & cared for that man, he had a heart of gold. Im deeply saden by his unexpected death. I still have a hard time believing he's gone. It breaks my heart! He had a lot of people that grown to love him because he was such a great, loving, caring guy. Always & forever he will be in my heart. Rosemary & Bruce u both raised a great caring guy that was perfect in every way thru my eyes. I will never forget the time we shared, great memories! I love & miss Zak so much it hurts! I hope we can all heal with time. Although, our hearts are all in pieces now hopefully thru memories we all will get thru this difficult time, the loss of a great loving man that had so much to live for. God just seen he was tired, tired of fighting thru his emotional & physical pain. This time God took his hand and flew him up to relieve it all, he didn't want to see him suffer anymore. He is now in peace & out of pain. God rest a great mans sole. I know he is watching down over u all. I love Zak now & forever. He will always have a special place in my heart! He loved u all. Family was most important to him than anything as he had told me. He loved u all! RIP loving Zak! I will never forget anything u told me. My thoughts are with u all! <3

“ Zak and I were a couple for 2 months and we are in a long distance relationship because I am in the Philippines while he is in Michigan. We shared one great perfect love and we built trust up until we parted ways. Zak has always been a needy bf but i loved him for that. He is a loving father and a very good friend to all. No wonder he gained a lot of friends in the Philippines. We remained good friends and he always wanted the best for me... You are one of the best Zaky... You will always have a special part of my existence.. You will always be loved...til then..
